FOCUS AND CONCENTRATION

INTERPRETATION & IF CONDITIONALS

WHAT WILL OUR LEARNING TRAIL LOOK LIKE?

Step 1: Watch and listen

Begin by watching the episode "How to Focus," which explores various challenges we face in maintaining concentration amidst distractions.

Step 2: Read and speak

Next, read the Harvard Health article that explains how information overload affects mental clarity and provides strategies for improved focus.

Step 3: Organize and write

Write a summary of the video and article, then research one specific topic related to focus to deepen your understanding.

Step 4: Exercises - Interpretation and grammar

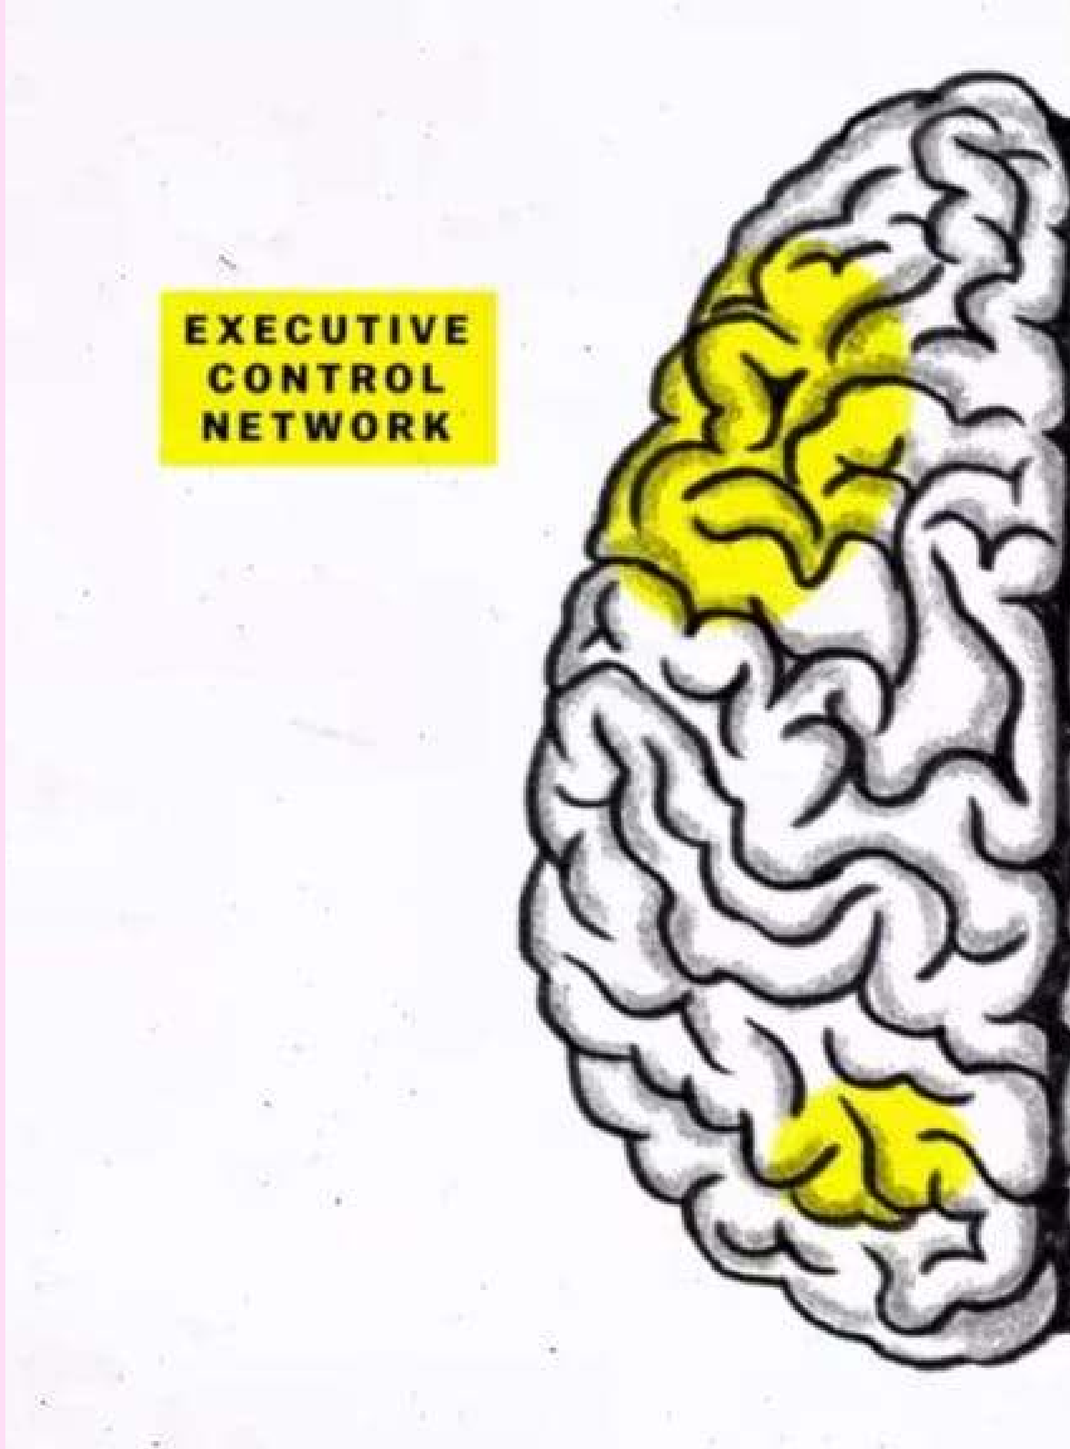

CLICK AND GO

EPISODE “MIND EXPLAINED”: HOW TO FOCUS

During the episode, write down every expression you noticed.

This episode reveals surprising reasons why staying focused is challenging in today's world, exploring distractions and offering expert strategies to enhance concentration and improve mental clarity for everyone.

click and go

TIME TO REFLECT!

Which expressions did you write down?

What does each of them mean?

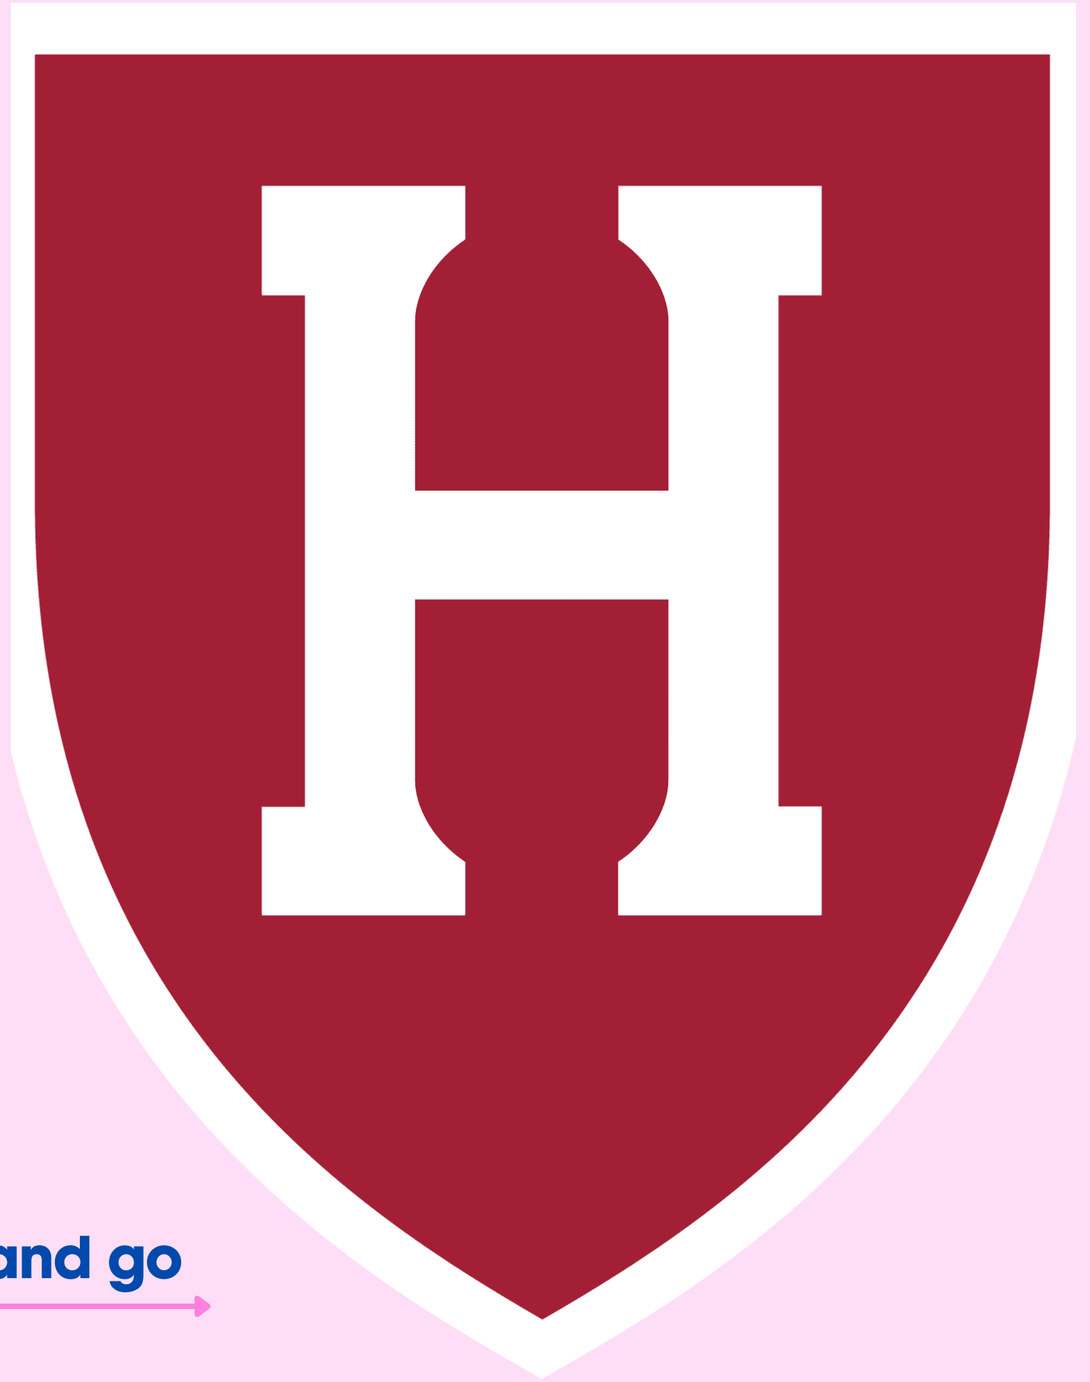

Have you already used them?

Can you create other sentences with these expressions?

TIPS FOR BETTER CONCENTRATION

Strategies to Enhance Your Focus and Productivity

This article highlights the reasons for fading focus, including information overload and stress, offering practical strategies such as mindfulness and cognitive training to improve concentration effectively.

click and go

TIME TO REFLECT!

Let's test your ability to write summaries.

What are they talking about?

What do the two resources, the video and the article, have in common?

What caught your attention about this topic?

IF CONDITIONALS

Understanding the different types of if conditionals

Zero Conditional

The zero conditional is used for facts. It describes situations that are always true and typically uses the present tense.

First Conditional

The first conditional refers to real possibilities. It discusses future events that could happen if a certain condition is met, using "will."

Second Conditional

The second conditional involves hypothetical situations. It describes unlikely or impossible events and usually uses "would" in the main clause.

DOING EXERCISES

CLICK AND GO

